Stamford Symphony

A Message from Caroline Stinson

I have been fortunate to be a member of the Stamford Symphony since 2011. Sharing music-making at such a high level is a joyful experience, and the musical community of the Stamford Symphony is generous and musically rich.

The life of a professional musician is uniquely rewarding and very competitive. I feel fortunate that the Stamford Symphony provides many opportunities for me in performance, not just in the main series but in education to school-age children, and in chamber music. My life is enriched by this Orchestra; I feel grateful, but also compelled to do my part to ensure that the future of the Orchestra remains secure, for future generations of musicians and concert-goers.

This is why I have decided to include the Stamford Symphony in my estate planning and have made a bequest to the Orchestra in my will.

We know that to keep our ticket prices at levels so all may attend our concerts, the Orchestra relies on generous gifts to ensure we remain financially secure each year. I hope you will consider joining us.

Together we can be sure that the Stamford Symphony not only continues to play great orchestral music for us all but reaches many more of our communities in the future.

Thank you for your support.
